Privacy Policy

We ask members to provide personal data for two purposes:

1. To allow us to administer annual membership renewals and arrangements for the Annual Gatherings,
2. To facilitate communications between members by inclusion in the Members' Directory published twice yearly in The Journal and on the members area of the PFHS website.

We do not collect or hold personal data about members from any other sources – only the information you provide to us.

If members do not wish their contact details to be included in the Members' Directory they can provide separate contact details which will be used for administration purposes only.

Personal data provided for administration purposes only is not shared with any 3rd parties except our Independent Examiner (who is currently a member).

Personal data provided for inclusion in the Members' Directory is published twice yearly in The Journal which is sent to all members (including the Polperro Heritage Museum and the Cornish Studies Library), and some members reside overseas. Once published this data is outside of our control. This data is also included on the members' area of the PFHS website, which requires a user ID and password to access.

We do not sell any personal data to 3rd parties.

If you need to make any amendments to your personal data, or would like to have any deleted, or would like to request a copy of what we hold, then please contact Richard Barrett:
